PASTORAL PONDERINGS

*A weekly column,
shared with parishioners,
by members of the Pastoral Staff.*

Fr. Timothy Schumaker, Parish Administrator

This past weekend we celebrated All Soul's Day. It is a day where we remember and pray for those who have died, especially our family and friends. While praying for the dead has long been found in the tradition of the Church, recent times suggest we may have fallen out of practice of this beautiful and necessary act of charity.

It is a strange thing to do, to pray for the dead. After all, what are we actually praying for the dead to obtain? The answer to this is based on the reality of Purgatory. Purgatory, another tradition that we do not speak much of today, is real. But what exactly is it?

To understand this we need to be aware that purgatory is not necessarily a place but a process. Even here on earth, we are called to live a life of purgatory. The word purgatory means to purify, or in other words, to achieve the holiness necessary to enter heaven. Purgatory is a process which prepares us for heaven.

When understood this way, purgatory is not just something for those who have died, but for all us living as well. All of us can be striving to prepare ourselves for heaven. However, as we know in our own life, we do not always take advantage of the time afforded to us here on earth. In fact, I can spend very little time preparing for heaven and rather spend a lot of time preparing for life on earth.

To account for this, God gives us additional time after we die so that we can "make up" the time we may have wasted on earth. That's a pretty good deal; that God gives us even more time to prepare for heaven if we need it. That said, we may be tempted to ask why do we need to prepare for heaven at all?

My favorite way of explaining this is with a sports analogy. For those of us who played sports, we quickly become aware of how we compare to our teammates and opponents. For example, I did not play basketball until I entered into seminary. Many of the seminarians had played basketball for many years. I quickly became aware of how poorly I played basketball compared to these men. I felt like I did not belong.

However, since I did not want to be the weak link and hurt my team, I devoted additional time to learn the game and increase my skill. While I never was the star on the team, I no longer felt like I was holding the team back.

The relationship between heaven and purgatory is similar. If I were to die right now and go straight to heaven, I would immediately feel as if I do not belong because there are many things I am still attached to here on earth. Even if I am free from sin, there are still sins I have the desire to commit. I would feel as if I was the "weak link" as I stood among all the saints who completely entrusted their life to God. If we are honest, we know that even our loved ones who have died were not perfect. To account for this, God gives us the training ground, the process of purgatory.

Purgatory prepares us for a spot on the team, the team of heaven. When we pray for the dead, we are praying that this process may go quick. That they may "practice", purify, prepare, themselves for heaven as fast as possible. We are acting as cheerleaders in a way, encouraging and helping them.

When thought of in this way, purgatory does not seem all that bad or scary, in fact it is a great thing for it allows us to experience the full joy of heaven.

 The Hands of Christ...Open to All

*From Human Concerns
 By Sandy Michalski*

Rich in Love

We greatly admire and sympathize with the poor widow in Mark's Gospel today. She loved God so much that she offered her last coins to Him. Jesus held the widow up as an example to His disciples. The worth of her offering was not determined by its size, but by the depth of the sacrifice and the loving heart of the widow. Fast forward to the current times. When we offer ourselves to God, there are many ways to demonstrate our love. The parishioners of St. Joseph are generous in so many ways, from financial giving, to weekly 'empty basket' donations, to large numbers of food-filled boxes for the needy, to generous support of St. Vincent de Paul and Los Toros, to bouquets of roses chosen to support women's care centers and so much more. Today, time is money. We are all poverty-stricken when it comes to time, and yet parishioners donate many hours meeting on committees to enhance our parish and parish outreach, volunteering to cook and bake, visiting those unable to attend Mass, attending classes to grow in their faith, serving as liturgical ministers, the list goes on and on. Today, as Jesus observes the parishioners in our beautiful church, He is greatly pleased with His many good and faithful servants. Thank you!

Did you know that there are two main parts of the Mass? They are Liturgy of the Word and Liturgy of the Eucharist. Please come to Fr. Tim's talk on the Liturgy of the Word on Thursday, November 14th, from 6:00 - 7:30 p.m. in the Gathering Hall. All are welcome.

Pumpkin Characters

In addition to becoming more fluent readers in second grade, it is also important to understand all structures of the story. For the month of October, our second graders have been busy working on a Pumpkin Character Book Report. For this project, they first chose a fiction book to read that was at their reading level. After reading the story, they identified who the main character was and wrote a five sentence paragraph describing that character. During this project, the second graders focused on the standards, or I can statements, listed below:

- I can demonstrate the command of conventions of standard English capitalization, punctuation, and spelling when writing.
- I can read with sufficient accuracy and fluency to support comprehension.
- I can identify characters and their traits.

When the reading and writing portion of this project was completed, they were then given the option to be creative and decorate a pumpkin to look like the main character from the story. These pumpkins were then displayed at our annual Family Fun Night Halloween event. Great job, second grade!

175th Anniversary Commemorative Books
